The Challenge

We are currently facing one of humankind's biggest challenges. We must drastically reduce anthropogenic emissions of greenhouse gases in order to reach the UN 1,5-degree global warming goal and avoid causing irreversible damage to the planet we inhabit.

An important step in meeting this challenge is reducing emissions from human energy production and use. Moving into the future, innovation and smart solutions will be two essential factors. This is also the reason why GodEl and Ellevio, in collaboration with THINGS, present this contest.

The win-win

What's in it for you?

The afinal winners, along with the group of top ten, will have the opportunity to pitch their ideas to a jury of experts and receive feedback. As a participant you will also have the opportunity to interact with two of Sweden's most well-known energy companies, learn about their approach to the future of energy, tap into their network as well as be fronted in their news content.

The final winners will win a sum of money - Total prize sum is 1,7 MSEK

What's in it for GodEl & Ellevio?

As two of the Swedish energy market's most well-known actors we have a great responsibility in shaping the future of the sector. Through our businesses we want to promote the transition to a truly sustainable energy system. However, this is not something we will achieve on our own.

Innovation on several fronts coupled with wide-spread engagement are key aspects in order to curb the global climate crisis and keep warming to 1,5 degrees in line with the Paris Agreement. Therefore we want
